This is known as "shift-ping." This can not be done in layers of DineNic or GM lighting, only in layers of Map and Object. Pressing Z with a selected object shows a larger version of that object in a model pop-up Holding Shift and Double Double the token will open the Character Sheet (if any) that the token represents. While holding down the Shift key, hold down the left mouse key at a point on the table. Shift during the measurement will keep the measurement line visible until you are discarded with a secondary click or making a new measurement X will retrieve your last measurement line after it has been discarded Shift+Draw: Drawing embedded in the grid (straight lines, tool points) of polygon at the edges, squares, etc.) Alt+Mouse Wheel: Zoom Alt+Resize: Ignore grid slot Alt+ Alt+ three pixels): Moves a selected token three pixels in the specified direction E+Mouse Wheel: Rotates a selected token by 45 degree or 30 degree increments, depending on the grid type Alt+E+Mouse Wheel: Rotates a selected token by increments 30 degree shifts, depending on the grid type Alt+E+Mouse Wheel: Rot a selected token by 1 degree at a time Right mouse + Drag: Pan Pressing Ctrl / Cmd + L. as Player: allows you to see the character's "Line of Sight" as a player, if you have two or more characters in your possession. Pressing Shift+Z shows all players the largest version of this object. Does not display the player's view exactly! You can use a dummy account, or go back to the game as a player, to be sure how he is on the player's side. If you drag a player to a map, the player will move to that map (this is the way to split the party) DISCLAIMER: The use of this tool is for use in your own campaigns. & Nbsp; More than 25 Roll20 keyboard shortcuts (Out.
